FOURTH SUNDAY OF ADVENT Year A 21st December 2025

Celebrating Christmas

Watching BBC Breakfast News recently there was an item about some of things which take place at this time of year. The Presenter then said: "of course, it's really important that people remember what Christmas is all about – being with family and friends." As I listened, I thought to myself 'I actually thought what Christmas is all about is celebrating the birth of our Saviour, Jesus Christ.' Getting together with those we love happens as a consequence – it isn't the core. How easily our society seems to have disconnected what we celebrate this week from its historical origins. I was at Waterloo Station a couple of weeks ago and couldn't miss a huge Christmas Tree, with lots of people taking selfies in front of it. The decorations were a curious mix of items, and it wasn't until I spoke with my niece that I understood the tree was there to mark the launch of a new series of Stranger Things (about which I'd never heard!). Nothing whatsoever to do with Christmas.

Well, we can sigh and bemoan the loss of an understanding of the central event marked at Christmas. Or we can accept reality and try to insert into the commercial, materialistic context of the world around us a gentle reminder of why Jesus came to be born. Children understand this as they hear the story at school – even in many schools which profess to be non-religious. Something about a baby being born in Bethlehem in unusual circumstances continues to grip the imagination. Which is probably why God chose to do what he did, and in the way he did it. Being born into human history in a particular place, in a particular time, in a country under occupation, with a despot King Herod determined to eliminate any potential rivals, requiring Joseph and his small family to flee into exile in Egypt – all of this was deliberate. The message God was sending to all humanity was: 'I am with you' in whatever circumstances you find yourself, no matter what.

Through the birth of Jesus, Son of God and Son of Mary, we are reassured that there is no corner of the world where God is not present. In Ukraine as missiles wreak destruction on people and property, God is still there – reaching out through the hands of the rescue services. In Gaza, where conditions are appalling, God reaches out through the Aid Agencies which, against the odds, persevere in attempting to get food and medicine to those in most need. In the Sudan where unspeakable atrocities are being committed, God reaches out through those who strive to get a cease-fire to allow the wounded and displaced to be reached and helped. God does not create these situations of conflict – human beings do. But he never abandons anyone and in Jesus says again: 'I am with you.'

This applies on a very personal level too. No matter where we are on our journey through life, God is alongside us. When things go well, when a child graduates or achieves even something minor, God is with us in joy as we give thanks. When we feel overburdened and depressed, when we suffer loss or mourn the death of a loved one, he is with us in those times too. In a world which changes so quickly, where events comes unexpectedly and out of the blue, we can feel battered and buffeted. We must remember – and Christmas emphasizes this – that we are never alone. God is with us, Emmanuel, Jesus, born to save us. This is definitely something to celebrate.
