RESPONSORIAL PSALM RESPONSE: The Lord is my light and my salvation

Third Sunday of Year A - 25th January 2026

Called and Chosen

Last week I mentioned that in these weeks between Christmas and the start of Lent the Church puts before us some of the most central points of Jesus' teaching and action. The Readings take us back to basics and the heart of the Good News proclaimed by the Son of God who was born to be our Saviour. This weekend we hear how Jesus began to gather a group of followers. He chooses a number of individuals to come with him, to begin the process of absorbing what he is all about. Over the coming years Jesus will share his life, his message, himself with this group of individuals who never claim to be perfect. But they will become his chosen group of Apostles upon whom the Church will be built. It all begins on the shores of the Sea of Galilee as he asks them to leave behind whatever they have been doing in order to devote themselves entirely to him. It's a huge ask – and they respond.

Before Christmas Bishop Philip sent us a Pastoral Letter on the topic of Vocations to the Priesthood. In particular, the Bishop highlighted the dire situation we face as a diocese with far too few students training for the priesthood. He noted that in the past year ten of our priests died (many already retired from full-time active ministry) and only one was ordained, Ryan Browne. This autumn it is quite likely that no students will enter a Seminary to train for our diocese. Often, when statistics like this are set before us, we assume that a solution will be found, that the Bishop will magic a few more priests (perhaps from other countries) to solve the crisis. But in the long-term that doesn't work.

Every baptised person has a vocation, a calling, something that God has in mind for them in their lives. I do, you do, we all do. Discovering what that might be and reaching the stage of saying 'yes' to God's plan can take time, it requires support from others, and it must be solidly founded on prayer. Discerning God's will for us is not always easy or clear. Sometimes we move in one direction because we feel it is the right thing to do but then realise it may not be. Mistakes happen – which again is why prayer, seeking the Lord's guidance, is so crucial. And we pray not only for ourselves and the choices we need to make – we pray for others, especially the younger members of our families and parishes and communities as they work out their way forward. It involves us all.

Next weekend Canon John Cooke will be here to celebrate the three Masses (Saturday evening and on Sunday). John has for many years been the Vocations Promoter in our diocese, appointed by Bishop Philip. His role is to encourage and support those who are considering whether God might be calling them to priesthood. Diocesan priests (like me, and like Canon John) come from parishes within the diocese. In fact, John is very much a 'local lad' who grew up here in Bournemouth. For me it was Holy Ghost Parish in Basingstoke. My point is that priests don't appear from some secret source: they emerge from our own families and parishes. John will speak on this theme next weekend and we warmly welcome his visit.

As Bishop Philip wrote, it is impossible to believe that God intends to leave local churches without the priests we need. Those priests of the future are in our schools, our homes, our churches. We must pray that they will hear the Lord's call to 'come, follow me' in this particular way.

UKRAINIAN MILITARY CHAPLAINS In December 2025, Bishop Paul Mason, Catholic Bishop of the Forces, travelled to Kyiv with Professor Eric Vermetten of Leiden University in the Netherlands to spend time with Ukrainian military chaplains and conduct a course on psychological and spiritual resilience. These courses are sponsored by the Apostolat Militaire International, a Vatican NGO which promotes a Christian vision of military life and international cooperation in the cause of peace. 25 chaplains were in attendance as part of a longer programme of formation they receive for military service. Unlike the UK where chaplaincy is very much 'baked in' to all three services, Ukrainian chaplaincy has not enjoyed the same standing or support – hence the need for guidance as well as international solidarity and friendship.

Bishop Mason said: "The chaplains are fatigued, angry, afraid but realistic and determined. I did not speak to one, or indeed any Ukrainian I met, who was mentally preparing a white flag. In fact, quite the opposite. "They expressed gratitude for moral support as they face an encircling gloom of injustice, and gratitude that their struggle was not being forgotten. Please remember the Ukrainian military chaplains in your prayers. They are brave and faithful men serving in the most challenging of circumstances." <https://www.cbcew.org.uk/bishop-mason-visits-ukraine/>
